platform indepenent high-level programming language

across all the operating system, the intermediate executable code we need to distribute is same. So there is no point in packaging this code for each operating system packaging standard.

- copy and extract the contents of the compressed distributed file into File system directory of the computer
- refer the vendor documentation in understanding instructions in running the software
- 3. Then manually run the repective entrypoint command files in launching or running the application.